'The Steps of Learning'

The mind of a child is a beautiful place,
An Eden where many things grow,
A garden of beauty where, sheltered by love
Grow flowers row upon row.

The mind of a child is a wonderful place,
Where wishes and dreams are so real,
Where kittens and puppies and gingerbread men
Can actually talk and feel.

The mind of a child is a mystical place,
Where character grows like a tree,
And children become either better or worse
By action of you or of me.

Herbert Parker
